

Call for Articles -- Childhood Education: Innovations

Childhood Education Innovations is the flagship magazine of Childhood Education International (CE International). Published for a global audience, the magazine delivers dynamic and interesting information about innovative education models, programs, approaches, and practices that improve the education of children around the world. Childhood Education Innovations supports positive, sustainable futures for children and youth by seeking out and delivering information about the most promising innovative solutions to today's education challenges.

We are looking for engaging articles, written in a conversational and practical writing style, that:

- identify innovative and effective practices that support the health, safety, and wellness of children so they can learn, grow, and develop optimally
- identify and explore new ideas and concepts that advance children's education and learning, particularly creative ways to help bridge inequality gaps in learning opportunities
- guide education leaders in bringing inventive, meaningful, and sustainable change to education and related areas of health and well-being
- discuss professional learning approaches to equip educators with the knowledge and skills to tackle evolving education challenges
- explore cross-disciplinary and cross-sector solutions to specific education challenges.

Target Audience

CE Innovations magazine is appropriate for anyone who is interested and invested in the positive changes that are happening in education today:

- Teachers • School leaders • Education consultants • Nongovernmental organization staff
- Community-based organization staff • Education professors interested in innovative ideas and practices
- Global education advocates • Foundations • Government agencies
- Businesses that support children's education.

The following questions may help writers to develop their articles:

- What education challenge is being addressed?
- How is this idea, concept, model, or approach new or better than what exists currently or previously?
- How does/might this innovation contribute something unique to the advancement of education?
- Can the idea/concept be adapted and adopted by readers to improve their own efforts to provide positive futures for children?
- What are the indicators of the innovation's success?
- Is the innovation sustainable over time?

The following information will help writers adhere to CE International's publishing requirements:

- Use clear, direct language, writing in active voice as much as possible
- Keep in mind our global audience
- Incorporate interesting, inspirational real-world examples
- Base writing on substantial experience with the subject
- Speak to a general audience, avoiding insider jargon or technical writing
- Show respect for and support inclusion of all children, regardless of nationality, ethnicity, gender, religion, age, or ability.

Authors should not be seeking to sell a product or service.

Writing Style:

The writing in the publication is “magazine style,” with less density of citations and more narratives about the concepts being highlighted. Do provide citations for all direct quotations, paraphrased statements, and borrowed ideas. Be sure to state clearly which ideas and language are yours and which ones are drawn from someone else.

Editing:

A Childhood Education Innovations editor will work to prepare your article for publication, possibly substantially editing or rewriting a draft to enhance its appeal to our readership. Childhood Education Innovations editors will make the final decision on headlines, illustrations, and other supporting content, and on the placement of each article in the publication. While the views expressed in the magazine are not necessarily those of the organization at large, we do edit for adherence to ethical and style standards.

Submission Guidelines:

- Language: Articles should be in the English language.
- Form and Length: Preferred length is 1,200-2,500 words.
- Copyright: Before publication, authors will be asked to submit a Copyright Transfer Agreement.
- Visuals: Photos, diagrams, tables, or figures are often desirable. Photographs should include captions and credit lines. Digital files should be 300 dpi. Authors are asked to obtain model releases for photographs.
- Publication: Accepted articles will be published according to interest in subject matter, space availability, and projected publishing schedule. All articles are edited to conform to the magazine’s editorial standards and space requirements. Prior to publication, authors are furnished with galley proofs to review.
- Remuneration: Authors receive no remuneration. Articles and illustrations are considered a contribution to the profession.

It is assumed that articles are submitted exclusively to Childhood Education Innovations and will not be submitted elsewhere. Submit articles to Anne Bauer at abauer@ceinternational1892.org
